An Introduction to the Archive

The Kurt Hahn Archive collects and preserves materials related to Kurt Hahn, a German educator and co-founder of Schule Schloss Salem. The archive is an important contact point for all questions regarding Hahn as a person of historical interest as well as the school's history, and the historical development of reform pedagogy in Germany. It holds materials dating back to 1920 which offer insight into the lives and influence of many important figures who have contributed to the school's development since its founding.

History of the Archive

The collection was initiated in the 1960s by Jocelin Winthrop-Young, then director of the school's branch at Salem. It has been expanding ever since. In 2011 the archive became an autonomous collection under the care of the Lake Constance County Archives. It is now housed in the Prelature of Salem Castle, close once again to the site of the school's founding.

Collection

The collection currently holds over 200 meters of archived materials. It includes political and educational writings by and about Kurt Hahn, as well as letters, memorabilia, speeches, paintings and sculptures, an abundance of photographs and photo albums made by students, as well as audiovisual media (videos, DVDs, and films). In addition, it holds a considerable amount of documentation about Schule Schloss Salem, including the estates of Salem teachers and information about other organizations which have followed Kurt Hahn's educational ideas. Furthermore, the archive maintains a library of pedagogical texts, research works and writings by former students.

Research Support

Assistance with research projects is just as much a part of our mission as other educational services, such as archive tours. We will give talks, publish essays and contribute to the preparation of exhibits. The Kurt Hahn Archive frequently contributes items to external exhibits and events. Moreover we are prepared to offer advice and do preliminary research of our collections as a starting point for your research questions.
